THE RISE & RISE OF INDIA'S HOSPITALITY SECTOR

Once known as the 'Golden Bird,' India is again capturing global attention with its rapid ascent in the global world order. From navigating global challenges such as the COVID-19 pandemic with bold measures like complete nationwide lockdowns and developing its own vaccine to hosting monumental events like the G20 Summit, India has firmly established itself as a key player on the world stage. The country's growing influence in global forums like G20 and BRICS has solidified its voice in international diplomacy. Additionally, while the global economy grew at a modest 3.2% in the calendar year 2024, India, the fifth-largest economy in the world, showed resilience with a growth of 7% (source: IMF) and is on track to secure the third position by 2027 with a projected CAGR of approximately 10%.

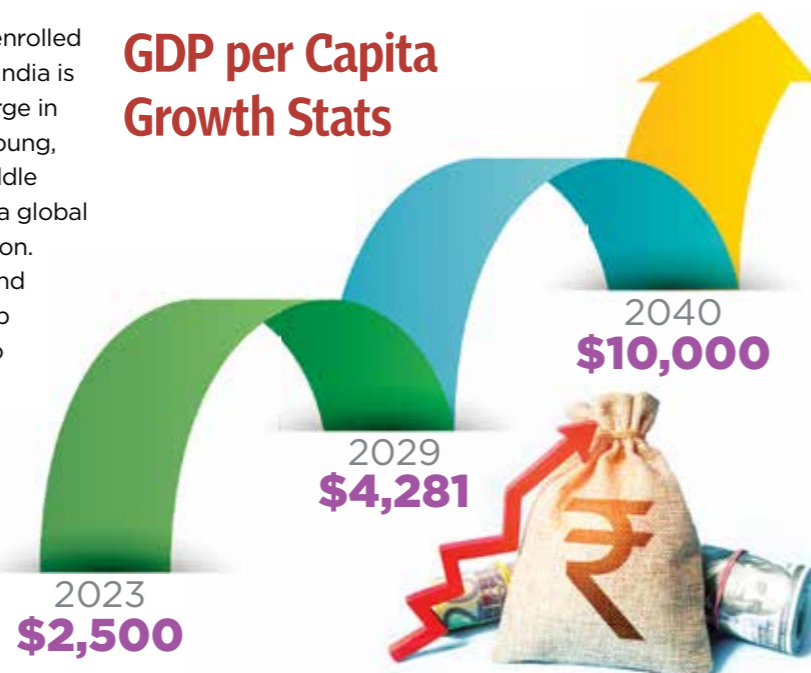

India's Global Economic Ascent

Source: IMF, World Economic Outlook, October 2024

With approximately 43 million students enrolled in over 1200 higher education institutes, India is also becoming an academic hub. This surge in educational excellence, coupled with a young, educated workforce and burgeoning middle class, is propelling the nation forward as a global center for manufacturing, IT and innovation. Investor-friendly business environment and policies have further fueled India's startup ecosystem, transforming the country into a magnet for entrepreneurs and venture capitalists. Additionally, as global supply chains shift due to geopolitical tensions and economic realignments, India is emerging as a preferred alternative to China for manufacturing, services, and investments, further accelerating its economic momentum.

Infrastructure Development

A KEY CATALYST OF THIS GROWTH

Robust economic growth has led to significant infrastructure investments, including the USD 2265.75 billion National Infrastructure Plan, - the largest capital outlay ever in the country's history. This plan encompasses over 12,000 projects across 62 sub sectors over the next few years; over 1000 projects are currently under development, including airports, roads, railways and ports, among others.

Tourism & Hospitality

DIRECT BENEFICIARIES OF GROWTH

India's economic momentum is fueling rapid growth in the country's tourism and hospitality sector, which is expected to contribute USD 1 trillion to the GDP by 2047. The country is renowned for its diverse cultural heritage, scenic landscapes, and rich historical legacy. India's travel and tourism (T&T) sector plays a crucial role in its economic development, contributing significantly to GDP and employment. Despite the challenges posed by global events and the COVID-19 pandemic, the resilience of India's tourism industry is evident in its robust recovery and strong growth in both Foreign Tourist Arrivals (FTAs) and Domestic Tourist Visitors (DTVs).

TOURISM GROWTH

This surge is driven by niche tourism segments—including faith-based, adventure, sports, culinary, medical, and wellness tourism—alongside the MICE (Meetings, Incentives, Conferences, and Exhibitions) and destination weddings segments. Governmental support and infrastructure development will further amplify this momentum, expanding tourism's reach beyond Tier 1 cities.

Sports and Events tourism is steadily increasing with predictions of Sports Tourism alone reaching a market size of $53 bn by 2033 with a CAGR of 17%. On the other hand, Events and Exhibitions are calling in large crowds from across the country. For instance, the Coldplay concert in Ahmedabad alone, had over 1.34 lakh attendees. With artists like Ed Sheeran hosting many standalone concerts and Shawn Mendes, Green Day, Louis Tomlinson, etc performing at Lollapalooza, this trend is expected to continue. The country is also hosting the first "World Audio-Visual Summit" to showcase its creative power, which is sure to attract more international events in the future.

The Indian Wedding Industry ranks second globally. 600 mn citizens in the age group of 18-35; number of HNWIs (with an asset value of $1 mn+) to grow by nearly 107% to reach 1.65 mn between FY2022 and FY2027 - indicating a potential uptick in the (already high) number of weddings.

Tier 2, 3, & 4 Cities
THE NEXT GROWTH ENGINES

While Tier 1 cities like Delhi, Mumbai, and Bengaluru remain prominent, smaller cities are becoming the next growth engines of India's hospitality boom. Economic activity shifts, improved connectivity, rising disposable incomes, and a growing preference for niche travel experiences are attracting significant hospitality investments in Tier 2, 3, and 4 cities.

FACTORS DRIVING DEMAND

Approximately 45% of India's urban population resides in Tier 2 and Tier 3 cities, with 40% of the total population residing in urban areas. By 2036, the country will have approx. 600 mn people living in urban areas, increasing 31% from 2011.

EXPANDING PRESENCE OF HOTEL CHAINS

2024 has been a landmark year for hotel expansion, with a record number of hotel signings during the year. Initial estimates show that over 47,500 keys were signed across more than 486 properties during the calendar year 2024. Over 74% of all signings by keys took place in Tier 2, 3 & 4 cities, compared to 65% in 2019. Recognizing the substantial potential for development in these markets due to increasing tourist footfalls and a scarcity of branded accommodations, hotel chains are aggressively expanding into these cities. With relatively lower development costs, these cities offer attractive investment opportunities for developers and operators looking to tap into India's next wave of hospitality growth.

Emerging Destinations

India's tourism and hospitality sector will no longer be just 'incredible'—it will be an 'inevitable' force shaping the future of global tourism

Kochi

Kochi, often referred to as the “Queen of the Arabian Sea,” is another success story. The city's connectivity has been significantly strengthened by projects like the Kochi Metro and the Kochi Water Metro, India's first integrated water transport system, linking 10 island communities with the mainland. These advancements have enhanced accessibility for both residents and visitors, elevating Kochi's appeal as a MICE and destination wedding hotspot in recent years. As a result, the city experienced a 56-58% surge in RevPAR in 2024 compared to pre-pandemic levels. With its ability to attract large-scale conferences, weddings, and corporate events—alongside its rich heritage, scenic backwaters, vibrant culinary scene, and urban sophistication—Kochi offers something for every type of traveler. Whether its business visitors, cultural enthusiasts, nature lovers, or luxury seekers, the city exemplifies how a Tier 2 destination can evolve into a diverse and dynamic tourism hub.

Jaipur and Kochi's growth serves as a model for other Tier 2 and 3 cities, demonstrating how a combination of heritage preservation, infrastructure investments, and diversified tourism offerings can create a sustainable and high-performing hospitality market.

Beyond the Metros Success Stories

Jaipur

Jaipur, popularly known as the Pink City, is a prime example of a smaller city transforming into a thriving tourism and hospitality hub through strategic infrastructure development, government support, and private sector investments. Positioned within India's Golden Triangle alongside Delhi and Agra, the city has leveraged its strong heritage appeal and improved connectivity to attract a diverse range of travelers. The expansion of Jaipur International Airport, handling over 5.5 million passengers at its peak, and the completion of the Delhi-Jaipur Expressway, reducing travel time to three hours, have significantly boosted accessibility. Simultaneously, hotel supply has grown from 2,500 keys in 2010 to over 7,500 by 2024, with a surge in upper-upscale and luxury accommodations catering to international tourists, corporate travelers, and destination weddings.

Beyond leisure tourism, Jaipur has successfully positioned itself as a premier MICE (Meetings, Incentives, Conferences, and Exhibitions) with world-class venues like the Jaipur Exhibition & Convention Centre (JECC) and the Birla Auditorium. The city has also become a sought-after wedding destination, attracting couples seeking their dream wedding with a stunning selection of venues, from opulent palaces and heritage havelis to luxurious hotels, all set against Jaipur's regal charm and cultural grandeur. The city's resilience post-COVID has been remarkable with hotel RevPAR increasing by 47-49% in 2024 compared to 2019.

FROM INCREDIBLE TO INEVITABLE: INDIA'S HOSPITALITY SECTOR ON THE RISE

India's hospitality sector stands at an inflection point, driven by economic resilience, demographic advantages, and proactive government policies. With rising disposable incomes, improved connectivity, and a growing middle class, demand for travel and hospitality services is surging across the country. No longer just a reflection of India's diverse cultural and natural assets, the sector has evolved into a key driver of economic growth, contributing significantly to employment, infrastructure development, and foreign investment.

However, the sector continues to face challenges that must be addressed for sustainable growth. Workforce shortages persist, requiring enhanced training programs to meet rising demand. Infrastructure bottlenecks remain a concern, with many emerging destinations lacking last-mile connectivity and efficient public transport. Over-tourism in hotspots like Goa and hill stations is straining resources, leading to environmental degradation, rising real estate costs, and quality-of-life concerns for locals. Additionally, uneven development continues to be a challenge, as many cities expand reactively rather than through strategic planning, resulting in infrastructure gaps and sustainability concerns.

Addressing these challenges through structured growth strategies, strategic planning, and targeted investments in infrastructure and workforce development is essential for the sector's long-term success. Public and private sector collaboration will be key to unlocking this potential, ensuring balanced and sustainable growth. With the right policies, strategies and collective efforts, India's tourism and hospitality sector will no longer be just 'incredible'—it will be an 'inevitable' force shaping the future of global tourism. •

India's Metros Deserve a Makeover: The Missing Piece in our Global Aspirations

MANDEEP S. LAMBA | President & CEO (South Asia), HVS ANAROCK

India is at a crucial juncture in its urban evolution. The country's key metropolitan hubs—New Delhi, Mumbai, and Bengaluru—are rapidly modernizing with state-of-the-art infrastructure, better connectivity, and improved urban mobility. However, there remains a significant gap in aesthetics, hygiene, and targeted city promotion, which limits their ability to attract and retain high-value business travellers.

THE NEED FOR DEDICATED CITY PROMOTION BOARDS

Globally, cities have recognized the power of independent destination marketing organizations. Initiatives like Visit London, Choose Chicago, and Visit Tokyo have transformed these cities into self-sustaining tourism powerhouses, attracting millions of visitors annually. Indian cities, despite their rich heritage and growing economic importance, lack such focused city promotion efforts.

Business travellers coming to India's economic centres primarily engage in work-related activities, often leaving without experiencing the city's cultural and leisure offerings. A well-structured city branding initiative, tailored to business visitors, could significantly increase the length of their stay, boost spending in local economies, and elevate the city's global standing.

RAISING AESTHETIC AND HYGIENE STANDARDS

is the neglect of aesthetics and hygiene. Compared to urban centres like Beijing, Tokyo, Seoul, or Kuala Lumpur, Indian metros often lack the finesse and attention to detail that define a world-class city experience.

Consider the transformation potential of spaces under flyovers and elevated roads—areas that, in global cities, are often turned into beautifully landscaped public spaces, art installations, or recreational zones. In India, these spaces are more often than not neglected, turning into dumping grounds or slum areas. Similarly, underpasses, which could serve as modern, well-lit pedestrian walkways with artistic murals and premium finishes, frequently appear shabby, poorly maintained, and uninviting.

Sanitation is another key challenge. While Swachh Bharat Abhiyan has made progress, India's urban hygiene standards still lag behind global benchmarks. Public spaces, markets, transport hubs, and even high-end business districts need a structured cleanliness and maintenance program, supported by stringent enforcement and accountability mechanisms.

A CASE FOR A MORE REFINED URBAN EXPERIENCE

India's gateway cities are the first point of entry for international visitors. First impressions matter, and while economic growth and improved connectivity are drawing more travelers, the overall experience of an Indian metro still falls short of global expectations.

India's cities must refine aesthetics, hygiene, and branding to compete as world-class business and tourism hubs.

New Delhi, for instance, is a city with an extraordinary depth of history, culture, gastronomy, and events. In theory, it has the potential to rival London, which receives over 20 million foreign tourists annually. Yet, all of India combined receives just around 11 million FTAs (Foreign Tourist Arrivals). The reason is not just a lack of promotion but also a lack of refined urban experiences that make a city attractive beyond its historical sites.

Public spaces in global cities are designed with meticulous detail—pavements are clean, street furniture is aesthetic, lighting is carefully planned, and green spaces are integrated into the cityscape. In India, the focus is often on large-scale development, but the finer aspects of design, finishing, and maintenance are overlooked.

BUILDING A GLOBAL IMAGE FOR INDIAN CITIES

If India aspires to be a major global airline hub and a top-tier business destination, its cities must align themselves with international best practices. This requires:

- Establishing City-Specific Tourism Boards – Independent city marketing agencies, with a mandate to promote each metro as a standalone destination.

- Prioritizing Aesthetic Urban Development – Implementing design-led urban planning, integrating landscaping, street art, and high-end public infrastructure.

- Implementing Global Hygiene Standards – Investing in high-quality sanitation infrastructure and strict cleanliness enforcement.

- Strategic Positioning in the Global Market – Branding Indian cities as dynamic, culturally rich, and business-friendly hubs on the international stage.

The time for action is now. India's economic rise is undeniable, and its cities are its most powerful assets. By refining the urban experience and marketing them effectively, India's metros can compete with the world's greatest cities—attracting not just business travelers but also positioning themselves as premier global destinations.

It's time for India's urban transformation to go beyond infrastructure and embrace aesthetics, experience, and global best practices—making our cities not just smarter but irresistible. •

Indian cities are at a crossroads—enhancing urban experiences can redefine their global reputation.

Indian Hotel Sector 2024 Performance Review

DIPTI MOHAN | Associate Vice President & Head (South Asia), Research, HVS ANAROCK
SHIVANSH AGARWAL | Research Analyst, HVS ANAROCK

India's hotel industry grew in 2024, with rising ARR and RevPAR, fueled by strong domestic demand and premium pricing.

In 2024, the Indian hotel industry continued on a positive trajectory, with key performance indicators such as occupancy rates, average room rates (ARR), and revenue per available room (RevPAR) showing significant improvements compared to 2023. This growth can be attributed to strong domestic demand and the gradual resurgence of international travel.

The sector closed the calendar year 2024 with an occupancy rate of 63-65%, which is an increase of 1-3 percentage point (pp) over 2023, but still slightly below pre-pandemic levels. Meanwhile, ARR has been on the rise, reaching ₹7,000-9,000 in 2024, up 7-9% year-on-year (y-o-y), reflecting stabilization after sharp rate hikes in 2022-2023. RevPAR has trended similarly, steadily increasing throughout 2024, primarily driven by the growth in ARR.

Solid Growth in ARR and RevPAR

The year began positively, with occupancy rates in Q1 2024 ranging from 67% to 69%, up 1 to 3 pp from Q1 2023 but still 1 to 3 pp lower than Q1 2019. Mumbai had the highest occupancy, driven by corporate travel and events like the IPL and the Kala Ghoda Arts Festival. ARR also increased significantly, surpassing ₹8,500, which is a 30% rise from Q1 2019 and a 9% increase over Q1 2023. Goa led with the highest ARR of over ₹12,500, followed by Mumbai and New Delhi. Consequently, RevPAR rose by 11% from Q1 2023 to ₹5,700-₹5,900 in Q1 2024, reflecting a 25% increase compared to pre-pandemic levels, with Mumbai achieving the highest RevPAR during this period.

Sustained Demand Amid Election Impact

The second quarter was influenced by general elections, which impacted overall demand. Occupancy rates fell to 61%-63%, a decrease of 1-3 percentage points compared to Q2 2023 and Q2 2019, with

INDIA HOTEL SECTOR QUARTERLY PERFORMANCE

Mumbai still leading despite a 5-7 pp drop from Q1 2024. Jaipur had the lowest occupancy due to the off-season. However, ARRs rose to ₹7,000-₹7,200, marking a 28% increase from Q2 2019 and a 2-4% rise from Q2 2023. Although RevPAR declined by 33% from the previous quarter, it still saw a 24% increase from Q2 2019 and a 1% rise from Q2 2023, driven by steady ARR growth.

Steady Growth with Consistent Room Rate Increases

In the third quarter, occupancy rate remained at 61-63%, 1-3 pp higher than Q3 2023, though still 1-3 pp below pre-pandemic levels. Mumbai continued to dominate occupancy rates during this quarter as well. ARRs remained strong and stable at ₹7,100-₹7,300, representing an increase of 31% from Q3 2019 and a 5% growth from Q3 2023. RevPAR reached ₹4,400-₹4,600, showing a 28% increase from Q3 2019 and a 7% increase over Q3 2023, demonstrating that the industry is still benefiting from enhanced pricing power, even though occupancy rates are still slightly below those seen before the pandemic.

Strong Performance Despite Regional Variations

For the fourth quarter of 2024, the Indian hotel industry demonstrated continued resilience and growth despite fluctuating demand across regions. Occupancy rates for Q4 2024 ranged from 65%-67%, with some of the highest levels observed in markets like Mumbai and parts of Central India, such as Ahmedabad and Goa, where occupancy exceeded 70%. However, some markets in Southern India (including Bengaluru) and other regions, saw lower occupancy rates around the 62-64% range.

ARRs remained strong, with significant increases in most regions. Mumbai stood out with an impressive ARR exceeding ₹13,000, driven by high seasonal demand; Goa and New Delhi also saw strong growth in ARRs. In Q4 2024, RevPAR increased in many markets, particularly Goa, New Delhi, and Mumbai, where it surpassed ₹9,000.

Overall, Q4 2024 was a strong finish to the year for the Indian hotel industry, with sustained growth in both average room rates and revenue per available room, particularly in key markets like Mumbai, Goa, and New Delhi. •

Leveraging Data Analytics for Strategic Decision-Making in Hospitality

MICHALE GROVE
Chief Executive Officer,
HotStats

In today's data-driven world, the hospitality industry is increasingly turning to data analytics to optimize operations, enhance guest experiences, and drive profitability. From hotel chains to restaurants and resorts, businesses are harnessing the power of data to make more informed decisions that shape their strategies and improve overall performance.

THE ROLE OF DATA ANALYTICS IN THE HOSPITALITY INDUSTRY

At its core, data analytics involves the collection, processing, and analysis of data to uncover insights that can guide decision-making. In the hospitality industry, this can encompass a wide range of data, including guest preferences, booking trends, operational efficiency, and financial performance. By analysing these data points, businesses can identify patterns, predict future trends, and make more accurate decisions.

The integration of data analytics into the decision-making process is no longer a luxury but a necessity for staying competitive in an increasingly complex market.

Enhancing Guest Experience

Guest experience is the backbone of the hospitality industry, and data analytics plays a crucial role in enhancing it. By tracking guest preferences, behaviours, and feedback, businesses can personalize their services to meet individual needs. For example, hotels can use data to identify returning guests and provide tailored experiences based on their past stays, such as offering room upgrades, personalized welcome amenities, or customized dining options.

Optimizing Revenue Management

Revenue management is critical in hospitality, and data analytics is a game-changer in this area. By analysing historical data, booking trends, and competitor pricing, businesses can implement dynamic pricing strategies that maximize revenue. For instance, hotels can adjust their room rates based on factors such as occupancy levels, time of year, local events, and market demand.

Advanced analytics tools can also predict demand fluctuations, allowing businesses to forecast high and low occupancy periods. With this information, managers can develop targeted marketing campaigns, offer special promotions, or adjust pricing in real-time to optimize room rates and occupancy levels.

Streamlining Operations

Data analytics also plays a vital role in improving operational efficiency. Hospitality businesses, especially large hotel chains and resorts, often deal with complex operations that span various departments, including housekeeping, maintenance, front desk, and food services. By analysing operational data, businesses can identify inefficiencies and streamline processes.

For example, predictive maintenance uses data analytics to anticipate when equipment such as air conditioners or elevators is likely to fail, allowing for proactive maintenance before problems arise. This not only saves money on expensive repairs but also ensures that guests experience fewer disruptions during their stays.

Targeted Marketing and Customer Acquisition

Marketing is another area where data analytics is revolutionizing the hospitality industry. By analysing customer data, such as demographics, booking behaviour, and past interactions, businesses can segment their customer base and create targeted marketing campaigns. This allows for more effective advertising, as promotions can be tailored to specific customer segments based on their preferences and likelihood of booking.

For example, a resort can identify guests who frequently visit during the summer months and target them with personalized email campaigns offering discounts or special packages for their next stay. Similarly, data analytics can help businesses identify new customer segments or untapped markets, allowing them to focus their efforts on acquiring high-value customers.

Furthermore, analytics tools can help track the success of marketing campaigns in real time, enabling businesses to adjust strategies and optimize spend on advertising channels that generate the highest return on investment.

Forecasting and Strategic Planning

Long-term strategic planning in hospitality requires a deep understanding of market trends, consumer behaviour, and economic factors that affect demand. Data analytics enables businesses to predict future trends and make informed decisions based on data-driven insights.

For instance, by analysing historical data and industry trends, a hotel chain can forecast occupancy rates, demand for services, and revenue projections for the upcoming year. This information can inform decisions related to budgeting, staffing, and investment in new properties or renovations. Similarly, data analytics can assist in market expansion strategies, helping businesses identify the most promising locations for new hotels or resorts based on factors such as local demographics, tourism trends, and competitor analysis.

CONCLUSION

The hospitality industry is becoming increasingly reliant on data analytics to drive decision-making and achieve strategic objectives. From improving guest experiences and optimizing revenue management to streamlining operations and refining marketing strategies, the insights provided by data analytics are transforming how hospitality businesses operate.

As technology continues to evolve and more data becomes available, the opportunities for leveraging analytics in hospitality will only increase. The businesses that embrace these tools and integrate data into their decision-making processes will be better equipped to navigate the challenges of an ever-changing market and provide exceptional service to their guests. In the end, data-driven strategies are not just a competitive advantage—they are a necessity for long-term success in the hospitality industry. •

Money, Money Everywhere - Is it Meant for Hospitality?

SHOBHIT AGARWAL
MD & CEO,
ANAROCK Capital

Hospitality in India remains underpenetrated by institutional and retail investors, and this feels like a missed opportunity.

I was reading through this IBEF report on the Indian hospitality sector, and I was struck by its duality – an industry brimming with potential but weighed down by structural challenges. As someone deeply interested in the interplay between industries and capital markets, I can't help but reflect on the opportunities and hurdles that this sector presents for investors and stakeholders alike.

The post-COVID revival of the hospitality sector is nothing short of inspiring. From the depths of lockdown-induced despair to the resurgence driven by revenge tourism, improved infrastructure, and government initiatives like the “Namaste India” campaign, the sector has rebounded strongly and is projected to contribute significantly to India's GDP by 2028. But here's the twist: while the demand side of the equation is robust, the supply side remains constrained.

Occupancy rates are up, average room rates (ARRs) have surged past pre-COVID levels, and the domestic traveller is the unsung hero, accounting for 94% of tourism spending. Yet, this growth isn't without its challenges. Supply bottlenecks, high capital requirements, and regulatory hurdles paint a less rosy picture when viewed through the lens of long-term sustainability.

CAPITAL MARKETS: A MISSED OPPORTUNITY

What puzzles me is the limited engagement of capital markets with this sector. Hospitality in India remains underpenetrated by institutional and retail investors, and this feels like a missed opportunity. The reasons are apparent:

High Risk, Low Return

Building a five-star hotel in India costs ₹2.5–3 crore per key, excluding land and approvals. Even after stabilization, the return on capital employed (ROCE) is a modest 12-14%.

Regulatory Complexities

Land acquisition, zoning laws, and approvals are labyrinthine, discouraging all but the most persistent investors.

Taxation Woes

The 18% GST on hotel rooms above ₹7,500/night significantly erodes margins, impacting affordability and profitability.

Banking Hesitation

With non-performing assets (NPAs) at 4.3% as of March 2024, banks understandably view the sector with caution. Credit to hospitality barely constitutes 0.5% of total non-food credit.

These factors collectively explain why the sector hasn't attracted the kind of capital flows seen in other high-growth industries.

WHAT'S THE SOLUTION?

While there are challenges, I believe there's untapped potential for innovative financing solutions:

Hospitality REITs

Real Estate Investment Trusts could revolutionize how we think about hospitality investments, making them accessible to retail investors while providing liquidity to developers.

Green Bonds

With the growing emphasis on sustainability, eco-friendly hotel projects could attract green financing, aligning with global ESG trends.

Blended Financing Models

Combining public funding with private capital could ease the burden of upfront costs and mitigate risks for developers.

Tourism-Specific Funds

Dedicated mutual funds or ETFs targeting tourism and hospitality could channel retail investments into the sector.

MY TAKE

Reflecting on all this, I see the Indian hospitality sector as a story of unrealized potential. Its economic contribution – 6.5% of GDP and 4.3 crore jobs makes it a cornerstone of growth. Yet, it remains an underdog in capital markets.

What excites me is the possibility of bridging this gap. Imagine a future where the sector is not just resilient but thriving, backed by robust capital flows and innovative financing mechanisms. As someone who believes in the transformative power of markets, I feel this is a space worth watching, and perhaps investing in.

Would love to hear your thoughts. Do you see the hospitality sector as a viable investment opportunity? What role do you think capital markets can play in unlocking its potential? •

The Indian Hospitality Industry: Poised for Strong Growth in Performance

AKASH DATTA | President - Consulting and Valuation (South Asia), HVS ANAROCK
ADIT ATROLEY | Senior Associate - Consulting and Valuation (South Asia), HVS ANAROCK

India's economic landscape is playing a pivotal role in fueling the hospitality sector's growth.

India's hospitality sector is on the brink of a significant transformation, driven by a combination of economic growth, infrastructure development, and post-pandemic resilience. As the country's GDP per capita surpasses critical thresholds, consumer spending on travel and accommodation is set to rise.

India's branded hotel inventory is growing but remains small compared to global cities, in some part due to a pre-COVID-19 slowdown in supply growth caused by various factors over the past two and a half decades. While post-COVID-19 growth in new hotel supply has regained strong momentum, the inelastic nature of supply means it cannot fully meet the rising demand. Consequently, our projections indicate that average room rates will nearly double within the next five years, from 2019 levels, on the back of strong growth in travel demand.

ECONOMIC FACTORS FUELING GROWTH

India's economic landscape is playing a pivotal role in fueling the hospitality sector's growth. The country's GDP per capita recently surpassed the $2,500 mark, a critical threshold often associated with increased consumer spending on discretionary categories such as travel and accommodation. Additionally, As India's GDP per capita approaches $3,000, notable shifts in consumer behavior are anticipated, particularly in the travel industry, similar to the changes observed in the U.S. during the 1960s and in China in 2008. In the coming five years, discretionary spending in India is projected to double, aligning with a rise in GDP per capita to $4,200 by 2029.

INDIA'S INFRASTRUCTURE STORY: A KEY DRIVER FOR THE HOSPITALITY SECTOR

Unlike in previous cycles, India's infrastructure development is a key driver of growth in the hospitality sector today. The government's National Infrastructure Pipeline (NIP) program plans to channel significant capital into key areas such as airports, roads, and railways, which is expected to drive domestic travel by road, rail, and air, projected to double over the next five years.

In response to the projected growth, the private sector in the travel industry has committed substantial capital, with some investments already beginning to materialize. For instance, Air India and IndiGo together have an order book nearing 1,000 aircraft—nearly four times the size of Emirates' fleet, which consists of approximately 250-260 airplanes. Over 70% of Air India's order book and over 90% of IndiGo's order book consist of short to medium-haul aircraft, designed to meet the robust domestic demand within India and its nearby destinations.

RESILIENCE AND GROWTH POST-PANDEMIC

Post-COVID, India's economy has rebounded robustly, driven by the untapped potential of its demographic dividend, global disruptions, support by government policies and initiatives and strong growth in key sectors.

The Indian hospitality sector has been a key beneficiary of this economic rebound. In 2024, the sector recorded strong growth in performance, buoyed by a growing demand and supply gap, combined with survival instincts of the sector. Average Daily Rates (ADRs) surged to ₹7,900-₹8,100, marking over a 7% year-on-year increase over 2023. Similarly, revenue per available room (RevPAR) rose by nearly 11%, reaching ₹4,900-₹5,100. Although occupancy rates have significantly improved, they remain approximately 2 percentage points below 2019 levels and are still about 5 percentage points short of the peak levels observed in 2007.

BRANDED HOTEL SUPPLY SHORTFALL

Despite the growth in branded hotel supply over the past two and a half decades, India's current supply of approximately 180,000 branded rooms as of September 2024 remains relatively small. This is especially evident when comparison is made to cities like Dubai and Shanghai, which individually boast around 152,000 and nearly 340,000 organized supply, respectively.

The strong performance growth witnessed by the industry between 2001 and 2007 led to the country's supply more than doubling between 2006 and 2012. The effects of this growth persisted until 2019, which saw the growth in new supply slow down to approximately 4%—the slowest in the last two and a half decades.

Post-COVID, hotel brand signings have yet again surged, with nearly a 100% increase compared to the period immediately prior to the pandemic. Despite so, our research indicates that by 2030, approximately 72,062 more hotel keys will open in the country, having grown at a CAGR of 4.3%.

WAY FORWARD

This significant increase in travel demand is expected to cause branded hotel demand to exceed branded hotel supply growth by approximately 250 basis points. Such phenomenon is expected to drive up occupancy, but more so ARR, which in our opinion will double from 2019 levels by 2030.

IN CONCLUSION

The Indian hospitality industry is poised for unprecedented growth and transformation. Driven by economic growth, infrastructure development, and post-pandemic resilience, the sector is set to benefit from rising consumer spending on travel and accommodation as GDP per capita surpasses critical thresholds. Despite a pre-COVID-19 slowdown in supply growth, the post-pandemic surge in hotel signings and infrastructure improvements are expected to drive significant demand. Consequently, average room rates are projected to nearly double from pre-COVID levels within the next five years, fueled by robust travel demand and the inelastic nature of supply growth. This dynamic environment positions India's hospitality sector for a vibrant and prosperous future. •

India's hospitality sector is set for rapid growth, driven by economic expansion, infrastructure upgrades, and rising travel demand.

Global Hotel Investments: Balancing Optimism with Strategic Foresight

STEPHEN RUSHMORE JR.
President and CEO, HVS

The hotel investment sector is experiencing a remarkable resurgence, driven by strong performance metrics and growing confidence. However, as the industry navigates the midpoint of the typical eight-year investment cycle, investors must balance optimism with caution. While opportunities abound, success hinges on informed decision-making and a nuanced understanding of shifting consumer behaviors and market dynamics.

REBOUNDED FROM PANDEMIC DISRUPTIONS

The global hospitality market has made a strong recovery after COVID-19 disruptions, which paused development for 3-4 years and inflated costs. Today, stabilizing interest rates and robust occupancy and rate performance have reinvigorated investment activity. Luxury hotels dominate pipelines, reflecting a market realization: high-net-worth consumers are more willing to spend on premium experiences than ever before.

However, this trend is a double-edged sword. Overdevelopment in the luxury segment risks oversupply in key markets. Developers should evaluate the long-term viability of projects to avoid saturation and ensure sustainable returns.

INFLATION AND THE MID-MARKET SQUEEZE

Unlike luxury travelers, mid-market consumers are grappling with inflationary pressures, forcing them to seek more affordable lodging options. This shift creates a compelling opportunity for mid-market service apartments, which offer a cost-effective blend of affordability and comfort.

These properties are not only attractive to budget-conscious travelers but also more cost-effective to operate, with streamlined services and operational efficiencies. For developers and investors, mid-market service apartments represent a sweet spot, capturing demand from inflation-strapped travelers while maintaining healthy margins.

OVERTOURISM AND EMERGING MARKETS

Overtourism remains a pressing issue in well-established destinations, prompting investors to look toward less-developed regions with untapped tourism potential. Countries in Africa, Southeast Asia, and Latin America offer significant growth opportunities, particularly as these markets have yet to reach saturation.

The challenge lies in improving airlift and articulating the value proposition to consumers. Investments in aviation infrastructure and targeted marketing campaigns will be critical to unlocking these regions' potential. By addressing connectivity and visibility, investors can help drive sustainable tourism growth while diversifying their portfolios.

term rental platforms such as Airbnb continues to reshape the hospitality landscape. Concerns over rising housing costs, overtourism, and lack of oversight have led governments worldwide to impose stricter regulations on these platforms.

This shift creates a fertile environment for traditional hospitality models, particularly extended-stay hotels and branded service apartments. These offerings cater to travelers seeking reliability and affordability while addressing gaps left by short-term rentals. Investors should explore these segments to capitalize on evolving traveler preferences and regulatory changes.

STRATEGIC CAUTION AT THE MID-CYCLE MARK

As we navigate the midpoint of the investment cycle, marked by heightened activity and optimism, caution is warranted. This phase historically carries risks, such as overconfidence and rushed decision-making, that can lead to misaligned investments.

Thorough feasibility studies are essential to ensure projects are well-aligned with market demand. Investors should also conduct brand and operator searches to identify the best-fit partners for their developments. Engaging unbiased third-party advisors can provide the objectivity needed to navigate complex decisions and mitigate risks.

A BRIGHT FUTURE WITH MEASURED OPTIMISM

The hospitality industry is poised for growth, with strong market fundamentals and numerous opportunities for innovation. Yet, investors must remain mindful of macroeconomic trends, evolving consumer behaviors, and competitive dynamics.

By balancing optimism with strategic prudence, the global hotel investment sector can continue its upward trajectory while building a foundation for sustainable, long-term success. For those willing to adapt and innovate, the rewards will extend far beyond this cycle. •

Hotel Valuations: Key Trends and Challenges for the Future

ROD CLOUGH
President - Americas, HVS

We expect 2025 to end in stark contrast to 2024, with rising hotel values leading to a much more robust year of transaction activity and debt placements. The ever-present buyer-seller gap will persist, but it will likely continue to narrow. Buyers should be able to find increasingly better financing options, and top-line revenue forecasts are coming together positively overall; conversely, sellers should continue to come to terms with unavoidable challenges that are restricting values on the expense side, factors that aren't likely to wane any time soon.

POSITIVE TOP-LINE OUTLOOK

Many lodging markets experienced the year of the plateau in 2024, as occupancy struggled to maintain even with the level attained in 2023. Some U.S. markets were certainly the exception, such as Minneapolis and Seattle, particularly those that lagged the nation in their recovery post COVID. We certainly missed 2023's summer of Taylor Swift concerts, and not helping matters was the vast migration of U.S. travelers to destinations abroad for their longer vacations. Inbound travel (particularly from Asia) did not strengthen fast enough to make up for the loss; however, we expect some improvement in 2025. More state-side leisure travel is likely to return, corporate transient travel should remain on the upward trajectory as the return-to-office trend continues, and the outlook for group demand is positive. Time will tell. Overall, we remain optimistic that 2025 will be better than 2024, even if just slightly.

As 2018 and 2019 become more of a distant memory, transaction activity is gearing up based on today's operating realities. The Federal Reserve (Fed) seems poised to remain in this new phase of monetary policy, which is providing much needed relief to buyers seeking to finance transactions. It's time to start buying and selling again in force.

COMING TO TERMS WITH CHALLENGES THAT ARE HERE TO STAY

Labor costs have risen significantly in this post-pandemic operating environment, and keeping turnover low requires more significant investments in payroll and the overall benefits package. New York City's newly enacted Safe Hotels Act may result in more hotels becoming unionized in the coming years, as well, which will be a factor to consider when buying in this market. Additionally, insurance costs remain an important factor, particularly in coastal communities that are affected by hurricanes, or those in fire-prone regions.

Buyers beware. Renovations that have been delayed because of the pandemic are now coming due, and these aren't cheap. We are seeing most change-of-ownership PIPs come in at $25,000 to $35,000 per room (a few even higher than $50,000 per room), depending on the brand, scope, age, and profile of the hotel property. For a property built between 2010 and 2012, even if it underwent a soft goods renovation between 2016 and 2018, a new franchise agreement for the next ten or twenty years may be costly and require significant upgrades, such as renovated guestroom bathrooms, new furnishings, new technology, and new signage, to name a few. It adds up. Any property that has opened since COVID will be much more attractive.

WHERE THE OPPORTUNITY EXISTS

We continue to see a wide range in profitability, and now is the time for owners to wake up and move on from management companies that have not been able to drive proper returns out of their assets since the pandemic. Gross operating profit (GOP) for two similar assets in the same market, all obvious factors being equal, can be wildly different. One limited-service hotel may be operating at a 50% GOP (right where it should be), while another may be floundering at a 35% level due to under-management and a cost-heavy corporate office burden. Buyers will certainly be on the hunt for these opportunities to apply an 8.0 to 9.0 cap rate on the under-managed net operating income (NOI), but owners that are holding for now too should consider a change.

Buyers may also purchase already strong-performing hotels at a 7.0 to 8.0 cap rate if the outlook for the in-place cash flow appears secure. Construction costs remain high, and the development timeline is long, so buying a hotel in a market that has elevated barriers to entry is appealing. Modest rate pops that can be achieved post renovation typically more than justify the elevated PIP costs that many of these hotels require in the year or two following the closing. Smart buyers also contract with firms well versed in managing insurance costs and property tax assessments. Moreover, if a buyer can cluster a hotel with another owned property nearby, certain positions can be shared across the properties and, thus, reduce the cost burden on both to create elevated GOP.

CARPE DIEM

If you seek to hold on to your assets for the next five to ten years (or longer), now is the time to seize the opportunity and make bold moves to maximize the cash flow (and value) of your investments. Leaning into new ideas, key experts, and high-performing management companies have the potential to drive strong GOP.

If you're considering selling your asset in the next five years, now may be the time to meet the market and do so. The coming year should be a good one, maybe even a great one. It may be smart to take advantage of this investment climate now. •

Forming Culture to Build Brands

DAVID KEEN
Founder & CEO, Quo

Branding is about crafting culture - an intricate tapestry of meaning that transforms organizations from entities into communities.

Imagine a village, nestled in the rugged heights of the Indian Himalayas. Narrow trails weave between stone and wooden houses, their slate roofs bearing witness to centuries of mountain life. Children's laughter echoes across the valleys, blending with the rhythms of daily tasks, as the aroma of freshly baked roti wafts through the crisp mountain air. Neighbors exchange warm "namaste" greetings, their palms pressed together in age-old reverence. This village pulses with life - a rich mosaic of ancient customs, traditional architecture, and communal bonds, each element weaving together a resilient, enduring culture.

What if branding could achieve the same effect? What if we imagined a brand as a village, much like the one described above - a living, breathing ecosystem where every detail, both seen and unseen, speaks to a shared belief system and common set of values?

THE SOUL BENEATH THE SURFACE

In the ever-evolving landscape of branding, we often fixate on the visible: the striking logo, the clever tagline, the captivating campaign. These elements matter, certainly, but they're merely the surface ripples of something far deeper. At its essence, branding is about crafting culture - an intricate tapestry of meaning that transforms organizations from entities into communities.

Consider our Himalayan village. It's far more than a collection of houses or a point on a map. It's a cultural ecosystem where architecture, customs, and daily rituals interweave to create something timeless and distinctive. This same principle breathes life into exceptional brands. When we treat brands as cultural ecosystems, we design them not just to be recognized, but to be felt - not merely consumed but profoundly connected with.

Culture isn't about corporate manifestos or values statements hidden away on websites. It's the lifeblood of a brand - the purpose that drives it, the beliefs that anchor it, and the principles that guide its every action. Just as a village expresses itself through its unique dialect, architectural character, and community celebrations, a brand conveys its essence through design choices, messaging nuances, and the experiences it creates - both for its internal family and external audience.

FROM TRANSACTION TO TRANSFORMATION

A cohesive brand culture elevates every interaction beyond the transactional. It creates resonance - emotional connections that linger long after the first encounter. Whether engaging employees, delighting customers, or inspiring partners, a brand built on culture weaves consistency and meaning into every touchpoint.

Think of how village life flows seamlessly between spaces and moments - from morning prayers to evening gatherings, from harvest festivals to daily market exchanges. Each interaction reinforces the community's shared identity. Similarly, when we design brand cultural ecosystems, we carefully orchestrate every element to harmonize with a cohesive narrative. Visual identities evoke recognition, governance systems ensure alignment and brand behaviors build trust.

WHY CULTURE MATTERS NOW

In an age where attention spans flutter like prayer flags in the mountain wind, culture is what transforms the ordinary into the extraordinary. A brand with a strong culture doesn't just exist - it thrives. It doesn't just communicate - it connects. Its symbols foster emotional bonds, its behaviors build trust, and its values inspire loyalty.

Culture is what makes a brand unmistakably itself. It's what turns a product into an experience and a company into a community. In the end, the most powerful brands, like the most vibrant villages, aren't built on transactions or taglines - they're built on the profound understanding that true connection comes from creating cultural ecosystems where people feel they truly belong. •

Emerging Extremes in Luxury Travel

MARY GOSTELOW
Global Ambassador,
Travel Writer & Influencer

"There are emerging extremes in luxury travel. Some want the finest bedsheets that money can buy. Others want a remote lodge in the bush. Some travel with what seems like an increasing number of family members while others want solo travel. They might book years ahead, or today, for tomorrow.

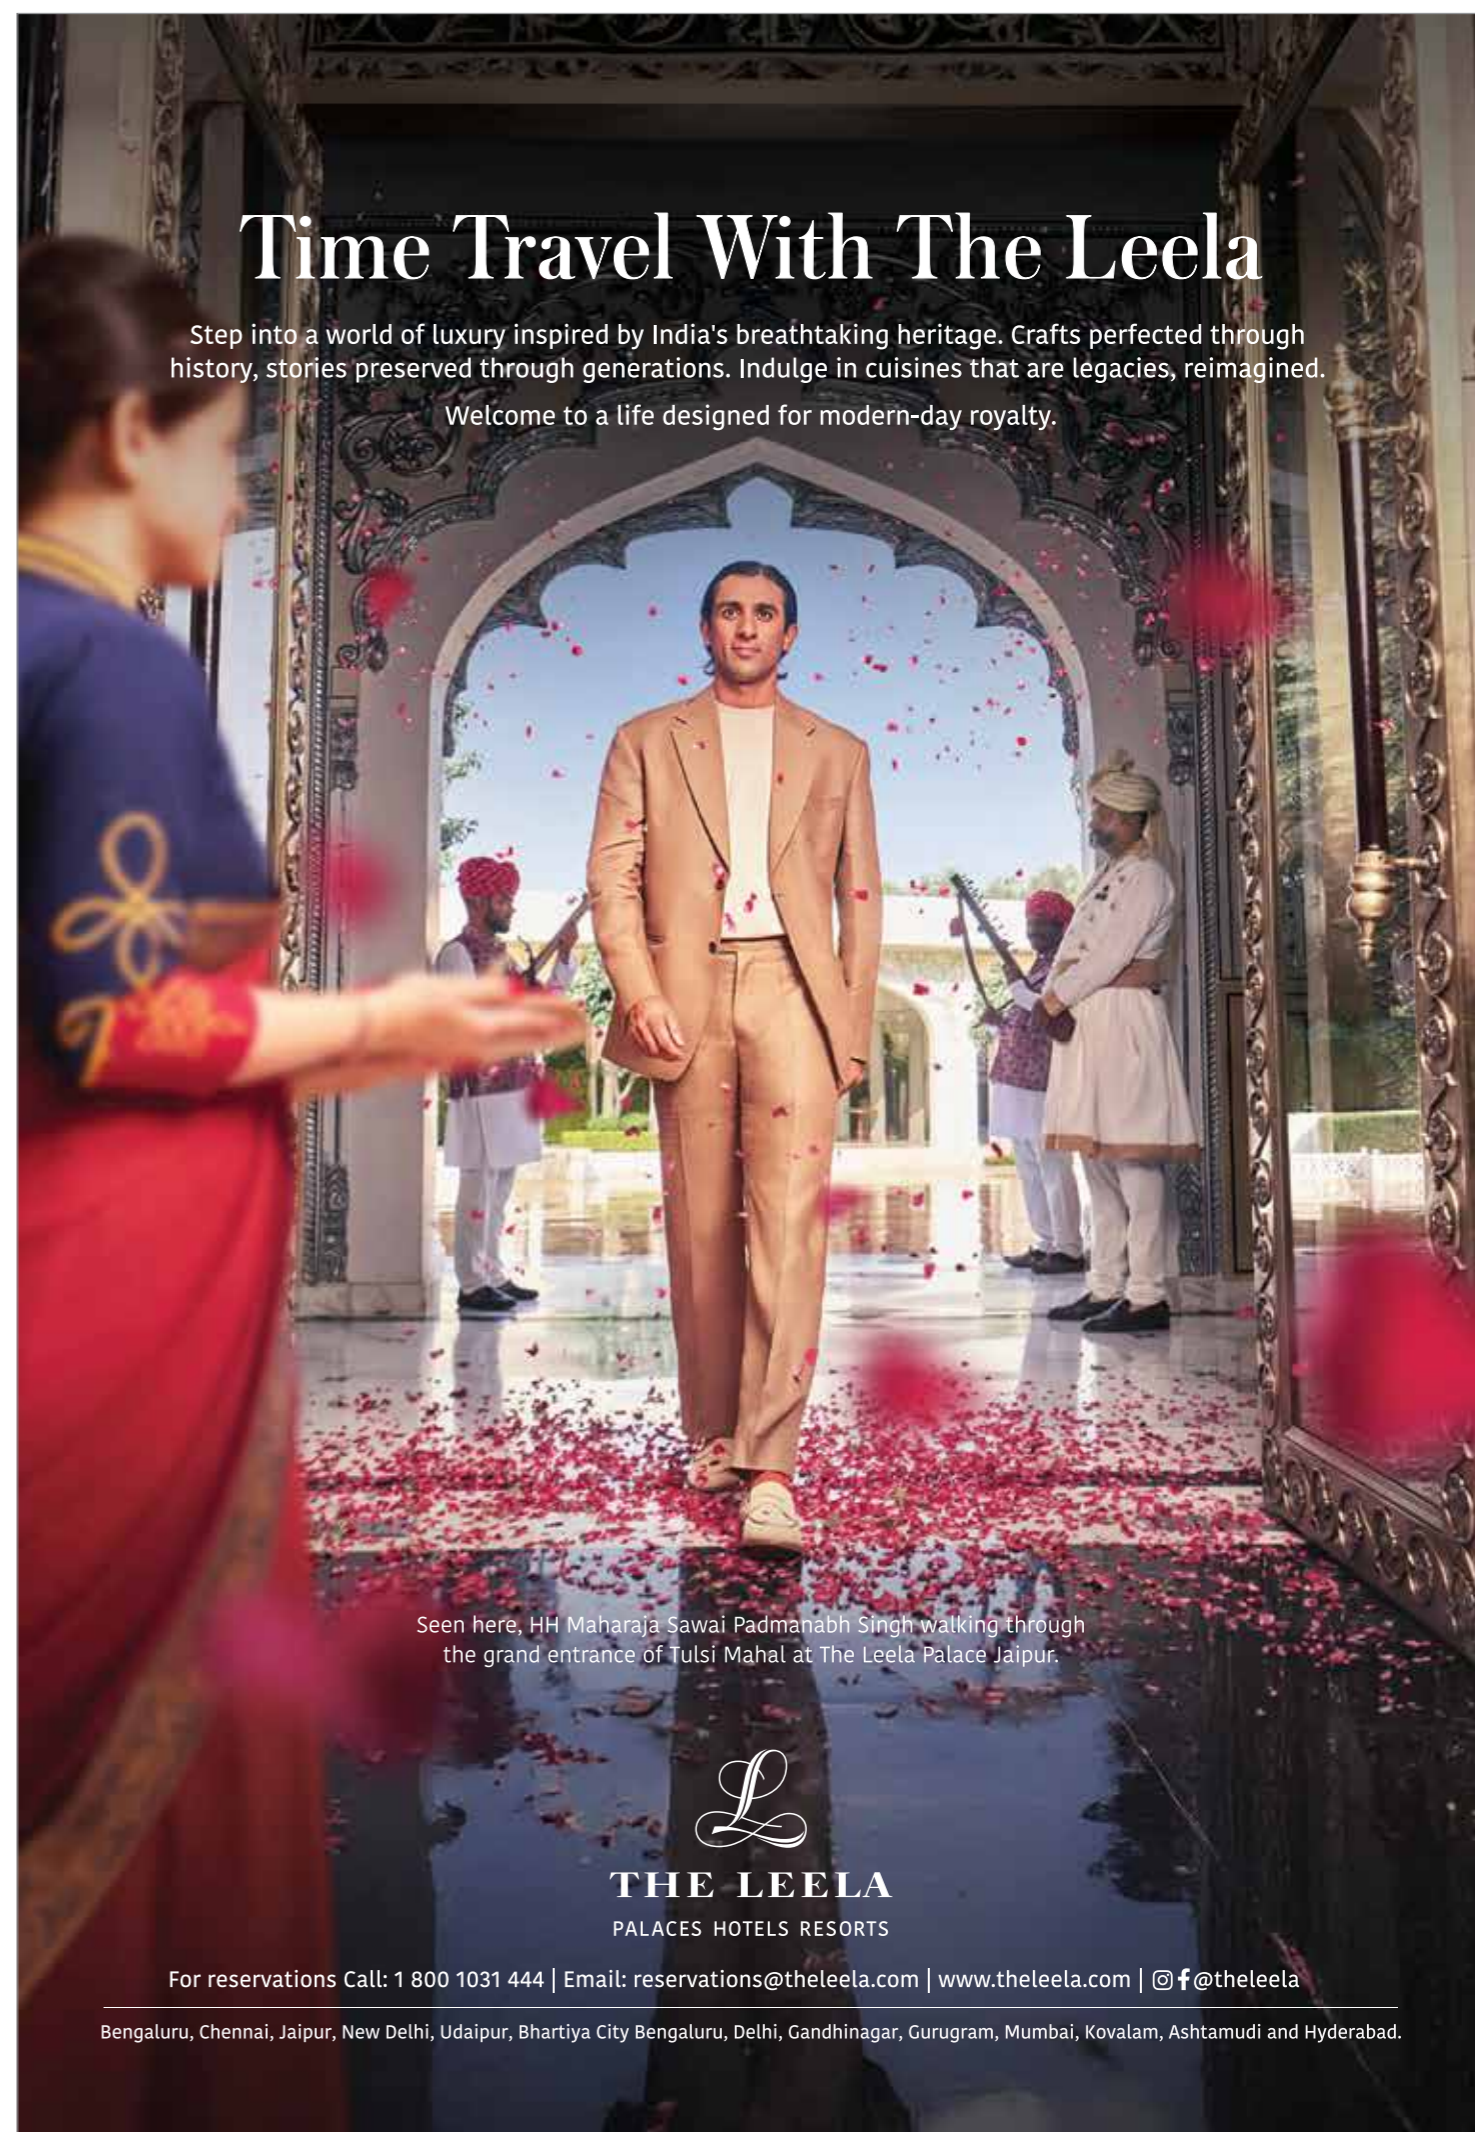

The commonalities are value rather than actual cost, and bespoke, and taken-for-granted sustainability. Ever wondered why a safari is so unbelievably expensive? The charges for bringing in supplies are exorbitant. Personalization requires a journey built for you, and no-one else. Sustainability in its wider sense involves interaction with the locals, wherever you are. A sense of place. Think of your group: in Scotland, Gleneagles doesn't turn a hair when a multigenerational family wants a table for 13 at breakfast - and singles are, at the same time, seated amply. Look ahead; trips to Iceland are selling fast for a July 2026 extreme-eclipse - and, while we think of it, how about indoor skiing in Dubai this afternoon?"

Changing Shades in Indulgent Luxury Travel

Once defined solely by opulence, luxury travel now embraces personalization, privacy, and purpose-driven, bespoke experiences.

Luxury tourism is like an ever-evolving masterpiece. Just as you believe the painting is complete, new brushstrokes come to mind, introducing unexpected shades and redefining the picture altogether. Once defined solely by opulence, luxury travel now embraces personalization, privacy, and purpose-driven, bespoke experiences. Today's affluent travelers are as likely to seek an exclusive Michelin-starred dining experience as they are to retreat to a secluded eco-lodge in the heart of nature.

The global luxury travel market, valued at approximately USD 1.4 trillion in 2023, is projected to grow at a CAGR of nearly 8% until 2030*. This growth will be fueled by the ever-increasing number of high-net-worth individuals (HNWIs) and ultra-high-net-worth individuals (UHNWIs). In 2023 alone, the global HNWI population reached 22.8 million, while UHNWIs numbered close to 630,000.

As the world comes up with newer offerings the very notion of luxury is shifting. The hospitality industry is redefining itself to cater to diverse preferences, providing experiences that are redefining exclusivity, from ultra-luxurious urban resorts to secluded lodges in the wilderness. This evolution impacts not only the services provided but also the way experiences are curated and delivered. On one end of the spectrum, traditional affluent travelers seek the finest Egyptian cotton sheets and exclusive access to couture shopping, others crave pristine, unique, never “experienced” before immersive experiences where luxury is defined by solitude and simplicity. Despite these contrasting preferences, a common thread among all luxury travelers is the unparalleled sense of value and exclusivity.

A few decades ago, the idea of vacationing in Antarctica’s White Desert was unimaginable. Today, ultra-wealthy travelers arrive via private jet to experience carbon-neutral luxury camps, offering rare encounters with the world’s most remote wilderness. Similarly, building on the theme of exclusivity, “members only” travel experiences are on the rise, with companies like “Exclusive Resorts” curating ultra-rare journeys to some of the world’s most coveted destinations. And as the world continues to push the boundaries of luxury, a new question emerges—what lies beyond? With private space travel now a reality, space tourism could evolve into the ultimate frontier for the ultra-wealthy seeking the next level of exclusivity.

INDIA’S LUXURY TRAVEL BOOM

India is rapidly becoming a major player in the global luxury travel market.

According to Knight Frank’s The Wealth Report 2023, the number of HNWIs in India (those with an asset value of $1 million or more) is expected to surge by nearly 107%, reaching 1.65 million by FY27. Furthermore, the Knight Frank ‘The Wealth Report 2024’ forecasts a 50.1% rise in India’s UHNWIs (those with a net worth of $30 million or more), growing from 13,263 in 2023 to 19,908 in 2028 – the highest growth rate globally.

India, with its diverse landscapes, rich heritage, and growing affluence, is uniquely positioned to lead the next phase of luxury travel. Whether it’s a luxurious, regal stay in Rajasthan’s palatial hotels, a peaceful retreat in the Himalayan foothills, a relaxing escape to Kerala’s backwaters, or an offbeat yet indulgent experience in the scenic landscapes of Northeast India, the country offers a wide range of experiences. India is also witnessing a surge in luxury urban retreats, catering to the modern traveler’s need for business-leisure integration in metropolitan hubs like Delhi, Mumbai, Bengaluru, and Hyderabad.

India’s hospitality sector is embracing experiential luxury by providing personalized and deeply immersive experiences. Urban luxury is evolving as metro cities adopt global hospitality trends, including the concept of urban resorts catering to business and leisure travelers alike. Such resorts in cities like Jaipur, Hyderabad, and Kochi are emerging as preferred destinations for business travelers who seek more than just a conference room. For instance, Jaipur, known for its destination weddings and MICE, is now attracting corporate travelers looking to combine work with cultural experiences. Meanwhile, Bengaluru and Hyderabad — with their flourishing start-up ecosystems — are witnessing increased demand for hotels that seamlessly integrate coworking spaces, wellness centers, and networking lounges, transforming urban resorts into places where work and leisure coexist harmoniously. Properties such as The Oberoi Gurgaon, with its expansive water features and contemporary luxury amid a bustling business district, ITC Kohenur in Hyderabad, which seamlessly blends wellness, fine dining, and world-class meeting facilities, and Rambagh Palace in Jaipur, offering a regal experience steeped in history and opulence, cater to discerning travelers seeking the perfect balance between productivity and indulgence.

Meanwhile, personalization has become the cornerstone of modern luxury travel, and India is at the forefront of this shift. Today’s travelers seek custom-designed experiences that are deeply rooted in local traditions and rich in storytelling. From a private yoga retreat in Rishikesh to a tailor-made tiger safari in Ranthambore, high-end travel in the country is now deeply personal. The rise of destination weddings, exclusive wellness retreats, and personalized culinary tours further highlights this shift. Glamping destinations like SUJÁN and boutique cruises in Kerala’s backwaters and along the Ganges exemplify how India is seamlessly merging personalization with authentic local experiences. Here, luxury is no longer just about opulence — it is about meaningful, immersive experiences paired with unparalleled comfort and exclusivity.

The next phase of luxury travel will be shaped by focusing on hyper-personalized itineraries, seamless digital integration, and sustainability-driven experiences. As travelers redefine the meaning of indulgence, the hospitality industry would have to shift from mere extravagance to deeply purposeful, bespoke journeys — ensuring that every trip is as unique as the individual embarking on it. •

Manpower Conundrum: What Should the Hotels Sector be Doing?

DILIP PURI
Founder and Executive Chairman, Indian School of Hospitality

The “manpower conundrum” continues to be the biggest ongoing challenge for the hospitality industry with attracting, developing and retaining skilled employees being the biggest barrier to future growth in an increasingly competitive labour market. To address this issue, the hotel industry should adopt a multi-faceted approach that focuses on recruitment, retention, and long-term workforce development.

The key strategy for the industry is to re-brand itself as a preferred employer. Historically, the industry has been perceived as being ‘Under paid and over worked’. While many companies and brands have done some great work in addressing this issue by rationalising salaries and working hours post COVID, the perception persists. And more so, in the minds of younger people who now have multiple choices of careers in jobs and sectors outside of the core hotel industry. Jobs which offer better remuneration and a better work-life balance.

The need of the hour is for the industry to get together and design and deliver social and digital marketing campaigns which showcase the hotel sector as a dynamic, rewarding career option. Highlight opportunities for career progression, international exposure, and skill development. A campaign for the industry like what the ‘Mutual Funds sahi hai’ campaign did for mutual fund investments. These campaigns should be developed under the auspices of associations such as FHRAI and HAI with the support of the Ministry of Tourism and be funded by hotel companies.

Another key area of focus should be to look at the IHM ecosystem in a more granular manner.

The NCHMCT regulates academics in the field of Hospitality Education & Training that is imparted at the Institutes of Hotel Management and Food Craft Institutes. In 2023, there were 93 institutes under the council including 21 (twenty one) Central Govt. sponsored Institutes of Hotel Management, 28 (twenty eight) State Govt. sponsored Institutes of Hotel Management, 1 (one) PSU owned Institute, 31 (thirty one) private Institutes and 12 (twelve) Food Craft Institutes.

The quality of education and infrastructure varies significantly in these institutions. Many of the Central Govt sponsored institutes and a few of the State Govt sponsored institutes and private institutes offer a higher quality of education and infrastructure than others do. Given that the manpower challenges exist at both white collar and blue collar worker levels, it may be appropriate to retain the top percentile of IHMs as hospitality and culinary management schools to address the white collar needs of the industry and convert the rest into skilling centres to cater to the blue collar work force for the industry. This will address the falling levels of enrolments in the IHMs and improve the quality of graduates and skilled workers for the industry.

Finally, the industry needs to invest in continuous education for its employees, particularly at middle and senior management levels. The younger generations entering the industry have different expectations, aspirations and mind sets than earlier generations. This demographic divide needs to be better understood by managers today in order to develop empathy to better manage young employees and arrest high attrition levels. Consumer behaviour is changing how people buy tourism, travel and hospitality products, digital technology and AI is changing the way we do business, big data and analytics are changing the way we are able to visualize data and make more optimum business decisions. Mid level and senior managers need to be able to consistently upgrade their skills in these areas to become effective leaders.

In summary, improve the perception of the industry as a preferred employer, reimagine the IHM ecosystem to address employment needs of the industry and blue collar and white collar levels and invest in continuous education of mid and senior level managers. •

Recruitment and Hiring Trends in the Hospitality Industry

SHALLOO DHILLON | Vice President & Head – Executive Search (South Asia), HVS ANAROCK

The hospitality industry has experienced profound challenges in the wake of COVID-19, some of which continue to shape its recovery and operations even today. These challenges span a wide range of areas—from operational and financial struggles to evolving consumer behavior and shifting workforce dynamics.

One of the most significant challenges for the industry has been labor shortages post-COVID. Many employees left hospitality during the pandemic due to health concerns, job insecurity, or better opportunities elsewhere. As businesses began to reopen, hotels, restaurants, and other hospitality providers struggled to fill positions, particularly in customer-facing and operational roles.

This shortage has led to increased competition for talent, higher wage demands, and challenges in maintaining service levels. The hospitality industry has had to innovate new hiring strategies and focus on attracting newer talent while also retaining existing employees.

The recruitment landscape has further undergone a dramatic shift with the new generations entering the workforce, such as Millennials and Gen Z, as well as the technological advancements reshaping industries, especially with the new and increased focus on AI. In the face of all of the above, hospitality companies have rethought and innovated their recruitment and hiring practices.

Hospitality industry as a whole would need to adopt automation and AI tools to reduce the manual tasks and facilitate more accurate and faster hiring process. AI should be used to filter resumes, assess candidates through data-driven insights, and even predict their success in the role. These tools reduce human error, save time, and enhance candidate experience, making it easier for job seekers to apply for positions. Some hotel companies have already leveraged advanced recruitment technologies to streamline their hiring process.

Hospitality companies, traditionally known for more rigid structures and demanding hours, are evolving to meet the needs of Millennials and Gen Z, who prioritize workplace culture, purpose, and career growth. Hospitality companies are putting more effort into designing exceptional employee experiences which include onboarding with more tailored experiences, ensuring they understand the company culture, mission, and values from the start, continuous training, mentorship programs, and career advancement opportunities within the organization. Mentorship is becoming a formalized part of employee development, offering Millennials and Gen Z more guidance from seasoned professionals. This also helps foster a more inclusive environment where younger employees feel connected and supported. Companies are also offering flexible working hours and remote options for certain jobs (like marketing, sales, or corporate roles), to cater to the changing expectations of younger employees.

Hotel companies are expanding their recruitment pools to include diverse tal- ent. By prioritizing inclusivity and equity in hiring, companies are not only addressing societal demands but also ensuring they attract top talent from a wider variety of backgrounds. The diversity of talent can lead to more innovative teams, better customer service, and a work environment that reflects the broad range of guests they serve. Hospitality has expanded its recruitment efforts beyond traditional hospitality schools, reaching out to various communities and skill sets through job fairs, partnerships with universities, and internships targeted at underrepresented groups. Job descriptions are being reworked to include neutral language that doesn't favor anyone thereby welcoming applicants from all backgrounds, experiences, and identities.

Social media platforms have become critical in recruitment, particularly among younger generations. Companies in the hospitality sector are increasingly using these platforms not just for branding but to engage with candidates directly, post job openings, and attract passive talent who may not be actively looking for a job change. Platforms like Instagram, LinkedIn, and Glassdoor are being widely used to showcase the company culture and attract job seekers. Employee stories and testimonials, community initiatives, team-building activities, and brand messaging are crafted to resonate with potential candidates and to highlight the perks of working for Hospitality companies. Hotels are using relevant hashtags to increase visibility on social media. Some hotels collaborate with social media influencers in the hospitality spaces to host live career chats or behind-the-scenes tours of the properties. These partnerships help attract younger and more diverse job seekers.

The growing demand for work-life balance, mental health resources, and benefits such as paid time off and counseling has become a central focus in recruitment strategies. Hospitality companies are making health and well-ness programs a core part of their employee offerings. Employee Assistance Programs (EAPs) are being offered by many hotels which provide counseling services, stress management programs, and financial advice to employees. On-site gyms, wellness programs, or even meditation rooms to encourage physical and mental are being offered. Paid Time Off (PTO) is a major draw for younger employees and hotels are giving additional vacation days, sick days, and even paid volunteer days to attract talent looking for a supportive employer. Providing comprehensive health insurance, including dental, vision, and mental health coverage, is crucial in today's competitive job market. Hotel chains are also considering childcare support or parental leave for new parents to attract talent from the younger generation who are starting families.

A combination of pay transparency and innovative benefits is becoming a game-changer in attracting, retaining, and motivating talent. With workers increasingly prioritizing fairness, flexibility, and well-being, hotels that prioritize these areas will likely have a competitive edge in a crowded job market. By offering transparent, fair compensation and a creative, inclusive benefits package, hotel employers can create a stronger workforce that is both loyal and motivated.

Companies in hospitality are increasingly incorporating sustainability as a key part of their recruitment strategy. This includes adopting eco-friendly practices, supporting community initiatives, and showcasing corporate social responsibility (CSR) efforts, which resonate with the growing number of candidates who value social and environmental causes.

The hospitality industry's recruitment and hiring practices are shifting significantly, and top hotel brands are leading the way by adapting to new trends and challenges. By integrating technology, prioritizing diversity and inclusion, embracing employee well-being, and improving employer branding, hospitality companies are making strides in attracting and retaining top talent. The future of hiring in the hospitality industry will continue to evolve in response to the demands and preferences of new generations, the changing nature of work, and global challenges. •

Hospitality is embracing innovation, inclusivity, and well-being to create a thriving and dynamic workforce.

Hospitality Branding: New Insights and Case Studies

DR. CHEKITAN S. DEV
Singapore Tourism
Distinguished Professor at Cornell University's Nolan School of Hotel Administration

Today scholars and industry leaders view hospitality branding as a critical success factor.

The large body of research published by scholars in the dynamic field of hospitality management has been slow to find its way into the classroom and the strategic, managerial, and operating practices of the hospitality industry. In the new series Cornell Hospitality Management: Best Practices, Cornell University Press will publish short books that present, in distilled form, current research findings on best practices in the hospitality industry. As recognized experts, the volume editors are ideally qualified to identify the best available research and present it in a thoughtful and coherent way that serves both the pedagogical needs of the classroom and the practical needs of the hospitality industry. The first books in the series will address hospitality branding, human resource management, finance, operations and revenue management, food and beverage management, and design.

Hospitality Branding, Volume 2, available on 15 April 2025, builds on my 2012 book which draws on scholarly work I published during the second “season” of my professional career, from the early 2010s to the mid-2020s. This book rests on a foundation over forty years in the making through learning, working, researching, teaching, consulting, and testifying on hospitality branding. These two volumes, taken together, encompass a total body of work spanning four decades. With the second volume in place, I have distilled the essence of my deeper thinking about hospitality branding to bring the results of my academic work to a wider audience that I hope will benefit from its insights. The contents cover about fifteen years of scholarly labor, presenting studies undertaken with the help of many collaborators, whose contributions I have acknowledged elsewhere in the book. Although the chapters are organized around four general themes, as a whole they represent an evolution in hospitality branding studies that reflects the maturing and increasing sophistication of the subject matter.

Today scholars and industry leaders view hospitality branding as a critical success factor. In a brutally competitive service industry environment in which services are easily imitated and intellectual property protection is hard to obtain, managing hospitality brands successfully has become the source of sustainable competitive advantage. Whereas hospitality branding was once a “nice to have” competency, today it is a “must have” competency for hospitality firms. In fact, CEOs find themselves also having to don a CBO (chief brand officer) hat.

The brand has not only become the chief means of attracting, satisfying, and retaining customers, but it has also, more broadly, come to represent a major portion of the market value of most hospitality organizations.

Over the past two decades, industry observers and the public alike have continued to witness an explosion of brands in every market segment and in every sector, from hotels to restaurants to resorts to cruise lines. As a result, hotel owners and consumers are being overwhelmed by a confusing sea of sameness in which it is increasingly difficult to distinguish one brand from another. Brands unceasingly search for the latest marketing niche by slicing and dicing their markets into smaller and smaller subgroups.

This book captures the most critical developments in the quest for brand domination over the past twenty years. Each of its four parts presents empirical studies followed by a related case study offering an important application or illustration of that part’s theme. Part I, “Brand Trends,” explores current issues, shared best practices, and key initiatives relating to brand management in a complex global marketplace; considers the future of the hotel and travel industry in a changing world; and closes with a case study that spotlights Barbados's efforts to revitalize its brand and vision. Part II, "Brand Configurations," features three studies that offer insights into the design of brand portfolios and address brand standards, dual branding, and rebranding, and concludes with another Caribbean case study focusing on villa rentals in Turks and Caicos. Part III, "Brand Performance," delves more deeply into brand success factors. In its chapters I explore relationships between brands and hotel properties, reflect on the contentious role that amenities play in shaping hotel/brand relationships, and focus on the aftermath of a crisis such as the Great Recession. I close with a case study that presents an effort to carve out a market niche for a luxury family-operated independent hotel brand in Positano on the Amalfi Coast in Italy. Part IV, "Brand Rejuvenation," considers efforts to address challenges as brands age and markets evolve. This section examines efforts by a major hospitality brand in India to stay ahead of the competition, offers key insights from a study of brand promotion in the largest Asian markets, and addresses brand proliferation and the so-called sea of sameness it has produced. The book's final case study examines Neemrana's conversion of centuries-old historical palaces and forts into hotels.

Hospitality branding was once a “nice to have” competency, today it is a “must have” competency for hospitality firms.

The purpose of this book is to make all these findings from scholarly research available to anyone with an interest in hospitality branding, particularly those who want to dig deep into the role that branding has assumed. It strikes a balance between the wisdom of recent history and the cutting-edge promise of future trends. Once again, as I cautioned readers in volume 1, while the insights offered here might not guarantee survival or success, they can provide a competitive advantage to hospitality brands seeking to survive and thrive in an increasingly crowded and confusing hospitality brandscape. •

Designers Group Creating Contextual Hospitality Experiences

The tourism industry relies on hotels to lure visitors, enabling them to return with a bagful of memories. The hospitality industry's biggest challenge continues to be on how to offer luxurious experience to the guests which is indigenous to the location. The importance of the role played by the design firm in creating the right ambiance cannot be denied and that is where the experience and expertise of Designers Group comes into play. Established in 1988, the firm believes in creating luxurious spaces that are deceptively simple and straight-lined. The use of materials, colours, textures and forms to not just impart style but also reflect local context has become the hallmark of hospitality spaces designed by Designers Group. It is no mean feat to achieve an infusion of luxury, grandeur, warmth and comfort in contemporary spaces that reflect the geographical location of the hotel.

Little wonder then that in the last 25 years, this leading brand in hospitality design has developed close working associations with multitudinous national and international hotel brands including Taj (IHCL), Marriott, Sheraton, Hilton, Pride, Holiday Inn, Radisson, Grand Mercure, Sarovar, Best Western, Mahagun, Ramada, Park Plaza, Novotel, Homitel, Heritage, Avadh, Regenta, Orchid, Golden Tulip, Fariyas, The Fern, Choice, 7 Apple, Fortune, Wow, Imperial, Sarovar, Blossom, etc. to name but a few.

Ar. Khozema Chitalwala, Principal Architect, Designers Group, believes that contextual and sensitive design adds in-measurable value to any project. A case in point being the World Architecture Award-winning Devi Ratn, DEVI RATN, JAIPUR The grand structural elegance is accentuated by the plush seating in vibrant colours while hints of gold on the pillars imparts a touch of royalty.

DEVI RATN, JAIPUR The lobby is designed like a Haveli Darwaza with intricate work on the perforated wood envelope that engulfs the entire space in luxurious warmth. Vibrant colours of Rajasthan are reflected in the upholstery and artefacts that mark this space.

which is part of SeleQtion by IHCL. This boutique property reflects Jaipur and the local flavour right from the entrance as the guests are drawn deeper into the Rajasthani culture at every turn of the public spaces till they relax in the plush luxury of their room. One finds an assortment of colourful hues through the composition of vibrant decor items, furniture configuration, light fixtures and customised soft furnishings that reflect elements from Bharatpur Sanctuary as the theme. Not just that, there is an ode to one of the greatest Rajput rulers – Maharaja Jai Singhji in the form of a bowing horse installation in the lobby. The entire hotel exemplifies bold, big and captivating with subtle regional nuances.

Another example of contextual relevance and reflection of the local flavour is Vivanta by Taj set in the culturally rich and shahi city of Lucknow. This luxurious and royal hotel is designed in a unique blend of Indo-Gothic style assimilating Islamic arches. The central dome, arches, jaalis, gardens and balconies, all come together to create a Nawabi vibe for the hotel. The neutrality of the palette, wooden latticework, diffused lights and sepia-toned art brings life to the spaces. The guestrooms are a celebration of chikankari as digital art in wallpapers and embroidery in the headboards.

VIVANTA The lovely golden Islamic arches add the local flavour of Lucknow to the space while the jaali work celebrates the craftsmanship of the region.

PILIBHIT HOUSE-IHCL SELECTIONS, HARIDWAR The courtyard is the central hub of Pilibhit House in Haridwar. The Neel Kanth colour and the Nandi sculpture in the lounge and coffee shop reflects the presence of Lord Shiva. The bright colour palette used throughout depicts the city of Haridwar and its temple architectural heritage.

FAIRFIELD BY MARRIOTT, MUMBAI The lobby is adorned with parametric elements like the circular rug, curved couches supported by wooden logs at the back and the quirky chandelier that sets the tone for a contemporary experience.

RADISSON BLU, ALIBAG Boasts of spacious expansiveness reflective of the beach and seemingly endless Arabian Sea to carry the outdoor experience within the property.

FAIRFIELD BY MARRIOTT, MUMBAI The meticulously designed dining space embraces minimalism to create a sophisticated atmosphere. The area is developed by installing plush couches and chairs, a marble tabletop, which is enhanced by the wallpaper with a marble print and pendent lights.

To achieve the local flavour for a throbbing cosmopolitan is always a challenge, but not so for Designers Group. Khozema firmly believes that “being simple is difficult” which is evident in all his designs, which cater to the clients’ needs holistically by designing for a wholesome experience. His belief has been given form in one of his recent projects in Mumbai - Fairfield by Marriott. The design concept is a minimal and contemporary setting while embracing and integrating the cultural and local influences of a region in which it is built. Mumbai’s heritage becomes the design narrative and inspiration for the ambience, though with a contemporary flavour for a city that is always on the move.

Being a design practice that believes in using technology to its advantage for the benefit of the clients and the project, Khozema has parametrically designed and installed furniture, furnishings and design elements to not just break the linearity of the space but to add an intriguing character that is aesthetically pleasing. To capture the nautical spirit of the city, the colour scheme includes whites to blues with all the hues in between.

The artworks document the untold stories of the journey from Bombay to Mumbai spanning centuries. A combination of materials such as wood, metal and marble were chosen not to be overwhelming but reflective of the mood of the city. This hotel is designed to reflect the values and culture that Mumbai is recognised for.

Whether it is a Radisson blu in Alibaug or Pilibhit House from IHCL SeleQtions, or any other project from the extensive hospitality portfolio of Designers Group, each one is a testimony of the firm’s resolve to be true to the mood, culture and ethos of the location, to ensure the best experience for the brands and their guests.

The mark of a successful hotel is not just based on the math - number of keys vs bookings, but also when the local populace frequents and identifies it as a true representative of the city and its ethos. Designers Group’s projects are a promise of that and more to the industry in particular and the guests at large. •
